

Craig Burelle

Craig Burelle is a vice president and macro strategies research analyst at Loomis, Sayles & Company. As a member of the macro strategies group, his key areas of focus are split between US economics and interest rates, and global equity strategy. Craig joined Loomis Sayles in 2010 as a macro strategies associate. He earned a BS in finance and economics from the University of Massachusetts, Boston and a Master of Liberal Arts degree in finance from Harvard University.