

Scott A. Darci, CFA

Scott Darci is a vice president and senior investment analyst at Loomis, Sayles & Company. As a member of the full discretion team, he focuses on the full discretion and strategic alpha products, as well as serving as a firm-wide derivatives resource. Scott has 12 years of investment industry experience in cross-asset derivative strategy, risk management and portfolio construction. He joined Loomis Sayles in 2008 as a member of the equity derivatives team responsible for researching, implementing and monitoring derivative strategies. Prior to Loomis Sayles, Scott worked for Anglo Irish Bank, where he was a senior associate focused on currency and interest rate risk management derivative strategies. He earned an undergraduate degree at Dartmouth College and an MS in investment management from Boston University.